

Rene P. Paquin.

I hold a Master's Degree From Boston College class of 1963, in Education specializing in Peripatology (the science of walking about). I received a Certificate from the Pennsylvania College of Optometry in the 1997-98 extension program in "Visual Impairment" targeting adults and children. Thus far in my career, I have taught about 200 people to utilize bioptics. I have worked extensively with the driver education community and State Rehabilitation agency to enable people to learn to successfully apply bioptics while driving. I continue to work with visually impaired clients to maximize their vision to maintain their independence.
